

Getting ready for childbirth

WHAT TO DO FIRST

- Choose where you want to have your baby.
- Choose a health care provider.

HOW TO GET READY

- Get regular prenatal care from your health care provider.
 - Follow your provider's advice.
 - Get answers for your questions.
- Read books on pregnancy and childbirth.
- Take a childbirth class, if you can.

CHILDBIRTH CLASSES DO THESE THINGS

- Tell you what happens when you give birth
 - Show you and your partner (or other “coach”) what to do during labor and delivery
 - Help lessen the fear of giving birth
 - Help explain what happens with a Cesarean section (C-section). Knowing what to expect is helpful when a C-section is planned. It is helpful, too, if it is not planned, but needs to be done for the safety of you and your baby.
 - Teach you how to work with the natural birthing process. You can do this through:
 - Exercises that make the muscles used in childbirth stronger
 - Massage
 - Focusing the mind
 - Relaxing and breathing methods
- You can find out about childbirth classes from:
- Your health care provider
 - The maternity department of local hospitals
 - Local education and public health programs
 - Local March of Dimes
